

JETTE sits at her desk and plays Solitaire on her laptop. There is a knock. Jette closes her computer, exasperated.

JETTE
Can't you work here for ONE minute in peace?

Kathi comes in. Shy and submissive. She has Lena's list in her hand.

JETTE
WHAT? I'm busy!

KATHI
Uh...I just wanted to show one or two suggestions of mine, which...

Kathi fiddles with the list, Jette takes it out of her hand and reads...

JETTE
...first job...small loan or waitressing...forged Hitler diaries - hadn't anyone have them before?

KATHI
The STERN. I thought we could put it on again...

JETTE
No, no, no, we don't wind something "again". We are the first. Understand? Saved?
Made into a philosophy of life?
Good!

She continues reading.

JETTE
68er parents...in love with the brother...most of it is for the
for the garbage can. Or the Bravo.

Kathi is about to start justifying herself, but Jette is not finished and laughs heartily at once.

JETTE
That's good! That is just awesome! The story with the squirrels!

Kathie's expression brightens.

KATHI

Really? I mean...YES! That's also my favorite story! The other one was also more like...

JETTE

(interrupts)

Tomorrow morning you'll do the interview with the squirrel Grandma. I'm thinking on something like: "Animal-Rescue in Retirement Home. More and more disappointed grandparents are turning on pets instead of grandkids."

Kathi eagerly writes Jette's words on a pad.

KATHI

...on pets, instead of grandchildren...

JETTE

If it turns out well, we'll replace the report about the one-legged child soldiers in Sudan. (thinking). For me it's too political anyway. Don't waste your chance, K.K.

Kathi beams at Jette.

KATHI

Oh man! Thanks! That's... I won't let you down, Jette, I swear, I...

JETTE

Jette Zink, InBeTwen Mag? Hi C.J. Hmm. Hmm. Rebuttal. Hmmm. No, she can forget it, we won't do it.

She looks at Kathi.

JETTE

Something else?

KATHI

Thanks again.

JETTE

Thank me if I haven't kicked you out the next two weeks!

Jette laughs at the joke.

JETTE

That was no joke. This is your only chance. Now get out.